Description of Data Collection (Abstract and link to Documentation of Data collection)	The data set gives an overview of the content of knowledge transfer by four international organizations (IMF, UNDP, WHO, World Bank) by looking at the social policy concepts and advice these organizations give countries in the former Soviet Union. Utilising the example of healthcare reform in Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russia and Ukraine, the related article aimed to examine the general advice these organizations give for the re-organization and management of the countries' healthcare systems. It focuses especially on the introduction of a mandatory health insurance system, which is considered as a way to put healthcare finance on a solid footing while simultaneously improving the healthcare sector's efficiency and quality of service.
